Dope Dangers Described to Homeowners

Heroin, marijuana, and barbituates are the stock in trade of the dope user and peddler. Torrance Police Officer H. E. Ingram told members of the Southwest Park Civic Assn. at the groups May meeting last week.

Describing the horrors of narcotics use to the homeowners, Officer Ingram, who is assigned to the city's juvenile bureau, referred to the attacks of heroin on the spinal cord which resulted in exaggerated movements, staggering, lack of coordination, and a mental condition which admits to no fear.

"Users seem to function solely with a nervous system," Ingram said.

Some of the jargon of the narcotic user was related to the group by the officer. He explained such terms as "blasting joints," "red devils," and "yellow jackets."

Ingram also described the danger of knives, and explained the countywide curfew law which makes it illegal for anyone under 18 to be loitering in public after 10 p.m.
